*Ebooks often lack page numbers (though PDF versions may have them). Kindle books have 'location numbers' and % marks, which are static, but those are of no use to anyone who does not have a Kindle, or is using a different font size display. So, to cite a quotation or section in-text of an ebook without page numbers, follow APA's guidelines for direct quotations of online material, using the major sections (chapter, section and paragraph number - abbreviate if titles are long). In general, provide as much information as the reader needs to locate the material you are using. E.g. One of the main points of his argument (Roden, 2003, Chapter 4, Section 3, para. 2) ...
